Medical Instructions

Everyone included in your application, whether accompanying you to Canada or not, must undergo a medical exam with a physician designated on the list of designated doctors. If you are a divorced or separated parent, a minor child of whom you have joint or sole custody is considered your dependent child, even if he or she usually lives with the other parent and is not accompanying you to Canada.

Instructions for this exam will be provided after your application has been assessed by a Canadian visa officer.

After you receive the necessary medical forms, you and your family members must undergo the necessary medical exams with one of the doctors on the list of designated doctors, unless you and/or your family members live in a country not included on this list.

You will be responsible for the costs of the medical exam for all your family members.

At the time of the medical exam, you and all family members must present individual passports as evidence of identity. If you and your family members do not already have individual passports, you should apply to obtain them now.

The permanent resident visa has the same validity period as the medical results, that is 12 months from the date of the first examination or test. Undergoing an immigration medical examination does not guarantee that a permanent resident visa will be issued.
